Imaginarios entre tierra y agua.

A reading of water is proposed not as a boundary, but as a paradigm for generating new habitable scenarios. Through a collection of studies, drawings, models, and narratives, the project constructs an imaginary geography made up of suspended places, mobile islands, and light, adaptive architectures—capable of responding to environmental instability with flexibility and vision. This theoretical and design corpus will serve as a key resource for the workshop participants, who will have the opportunity to engage directly with the pavilion's content, as well as with its curators and authors.
