

Weekends on Architecture

The Weekends on Architecture will supplement the curatorial program for Biennale Architettura 2020 through a series of lectures and panels that will bring together architects and scholars from around the world to address the question How Will We Live Together? The specific topics of the panels have been inspired by recurring issues in the projects of the participants. These are:

- Climate Change and Architecture: on the new challenges that climate change is putting in front of architecture.
- The Spaces of Revolutions: on the role of public space in recent urban uprisings.
- Techniques of Reconstruction: on new and renewed construction methods used in relocation and reconstruction.
- Co-Habitation: on the changing forms of collective housing across the globe.
- The Architecture of Education/ The Education of the Architect: on new pedagogies and their connection to architecture.
- Curatorial Architecture: on the relationship between curation and architecture

Between October and November 2020, there will be three full weekends, each dedicated to two topics and organized in the form of panels and lectures.

Each weekend will consist of four panels: Saturday morning (10-1pm), Saturday evening (2-5 pm), Sunday morning (10-1 pm), Sunday evening (2-5 pm). Every day will close with a keynote lecture (5.30-6.30 pm).
